COVER EXPLAINED:

The cover depicts my 7th paranormal investigation. The home was built in the 1800s and was next to the Marysville Cemetery. While I was standing outside with the occupant of the house, we both saw the full body apparition of the woman in the bathrobe on the 2nd floor terrace, walking from one end to the other. The occupant and I were in shock, we were looking at a full body apparition. The apparition is the previous owner who was an alcoholic and drowned in her bathtub after a night of binge drinking. When I was snapping pictures, I was getting a large red sphere moving from left to right, down the stairs towards me and the occupant. The sphere was in 6 of my photos. The occupant fell to her knees and started crying, she was so scared of the apparition. I cleansed her home and everything went back to normal. Author: Paul Dale Roberts aka The Demon Warrior.

A Case of Lycanthropy

By Paul Dale Roberts, HPI's Esoteric Detective
Halo Paranormal Investigations

What is Lycanthropy you may ask? According to The American Journal of Psychiatry Vol. 134, No. 10. published in October 1977 it states:

"Lycanthropy, a psychosis in which the patient has delusions of being a wild animal (usually a wolf), has been recorded since antiquity. The Book of Daniel describes King Nebuchadnezzar as suffering from depression that deteriorated over a seven-year period into a frank psychosis at which time he imagined himself a wolf. Among the first medical descriptions were those of Paulus Aegineta during the later days of the Roman Empire. In his description of the symptom complex, Aegineta made reference to Greek mythology in which Zeus turned King Lycaon of Arcadia into a raging wolf. Thereafter, references to lycanthropy appeared in the ancient literature. Many medieval theologians envisioned lycanthropy as a consequence of the evil eye. Delusions of being a wolf or some other feared animal are universal and, although rare in the industrialized countries, still occur in China, India, Africa, and Central and South America. The animals in the delusional transformation include leopards, lions, elephants, crocodiles, sharks, buffalo, eagles, and serpents. Not infrequently, bizarre and chaotic sexuality is expressed in a primitive way through the lycanthropic symptom complex. Patients whose internal fears exceed their coping mechanisms may externalize them via projection and constitute a serious threat to others. Throughout the ages, such individuals have been feared because of their tendencies to commit bestial acts and were themselves hunted and killed by the populace. Many of these people were paranoid schizophrenics."

The Demon Warrior interviews 2 proclaimed werewolves
Lolita Moonshadow and Katrina Kanine at Starbucks in Sacramento, C

Thoughts of werewolf movies may come to your mind from: The Boy Who Cried Wolf, Blood, Bad Moon, The Curse of the Werewolf, Death Moon, Face of the Screaming Werewolf, Teen Wolf, The Wolfman, Project: Metal Beast - DNA Overlord and Ginger Snaps. But, we're not here to talk about good werewolf horror movies, we are here to talk about two real werewolves! Lolita Moonshadow and Katrina Kanine!

I get a call from Lolita Moonshadow and Katrina Kanine. They are self-proclaimed werewolves. What the? Okay Lolita and Katrina, where can I meet you at? We first met at the Avid Reader at Broadway and crossed the street over to Starbucks for a refreshing frappachino. Lolita and Katrina are cousins, they claim to be of Romanian descent. They claim to have a long history of werewolves in their family. I asked them, how do you know you are werewolves, besides the Romanian descent and thinking your family members are werewolves? They said they both crave raw meat. When a dog, cat or a rabbit crosses their paths, they have the urge to 'chase'. They feel domination over men, physically and mentally. When the full moon rises, they feel the urge to hunt. They must suppress their dark desires. They said they have a lot of dark desires within their inner souls.

I asked them to elaborate on their dark desires and they asked me if I ever saw An American Werewolf in London and they left it at that. I pondered...do they have the desire to kill? They both feel they have a chemical imbalance during a full moon, but feel they have everything under control. They both showed me their unusual long canines. I don't know if they were unusually long, or if they stood out more. They said that during a full moon, they get more hair on their arms and legs. They said that they have a keen sense of smell and after they get used to my smell, they would be able to sniff me out a block away.

Katrina took my arm and dug in a bit with her fingernails and looked at me and said..."Paul, I have a hunger!" Okay, okay, just as long as it is not me! We discussed if silver bullets can kill werewolves and they said that a real werewolf can be killed by any bullet, that is a myth. They told me that their eyesight changes over to seeing everything in black and white during a full moon, they feel greater strength and are quite agile. They claim that if they are with their boyfriends during a full moon, their sexual desires are greatly heightened and their boyfriends are not able to handle their wild frenzy. They describe it as throwing a bull carcass in the Amazon river and watching piranhas go into a feeding frenzy. They said that their love life had dwindled, when anytime their lovers discovered the true essence of their beings. They said that last week, their boyfriends left them and they are single again.

At this point of time, I noticed a bead of sweat dripping from my brow. I knew I better end this interview as quickly as I started it. I noticed that Lolita had purchased a werewolf book from Avid Reader. Yes! These girls were truly into lycanthropy. Before, I left, we discussed werewolf sightings in Placerville and the Sierras. They said, that at times they feel a calling for the Sierras to find their brethren. What is so unusual, after I met them, I have been contacted by another werewolf girl in Fremont and I plan to interview her too. She claims that there are werewolf sightings in Antioch. She has a very interesting story to tell also! When I stood up from Starbucks, both were eyeing me strangely and both stood around me, as if they were blocking me from the entrance. Lolita grabbed my shoulder and said..."Paul, remember one thing, doctor up our photo, we do not want to be identified for this article and make sure not to identify us in anyway in this article. We know where you live!" I looked back at Lolita and Katrina and said..."sure, no problem, no problem at all!"

As I left Starbucks, I thought how safer it would be to just hunt ghosts, they don't make threats! Before I close this article, I met Tanya Filer, a clerk at my local Bel-Air and she told me about an abandoned house in Elk Grove that she wants me to investigate. The house has been abandoned for 7 years, because no one will purchase the home, its reputed to be haunted. The story goes that a builder of the house, killed himself with a nail gun. People who have entered the home, claim that the phantom builder looks at them and is holding a nail gun in his hand. Okay, Tanya, where is this house? I am willing and ready to investigate! As I rode home tonight on the lightrail, Julie Surjan a good friend of mine, who knows I am a ghost hunter, had me all hooked on her story. She said, that a strange thing happened to her last night. She was watching TV and saw something at the corner of her eye, it was dark and black. I asked..."was it a shadow person?" She looks at me and laughs..."no, it was a black widow spider! I had the hardest time killing the thing!"

My nephew Michaelis Jacoby was a very well-known DJ. Michaelis has performed in clubs in Los Angeles; Moscow, Russia and Bali. Bali is known as a party town, but there are paranormal stories that originate from all over Indonesia. The people of Indonesia take the stories of ghosts very seriously. Ubud and the broader Bali area are considered haunted by many locals and tourists, deeply tied to the island’s active belief in spirits and black magic. Specific sites in or near Ubud, such as Tanah Merah Art Resort and certain villas, have reported sightings, while others like the Taman Festival amusement park and abandoned hotels are often described as occupied by ghosts. Let's take a look at some of the haunted spots in Ubud and the Bali region.

in Ubud, Indonesia, when he encounters the ghost of No Eyes!

Uma Dawa Resort & Spa (Ubud):
Recent visitors (2026) have reported spooky experiences, including mysterious 3 am knocking on doors, according to a Tripadvisor review. Tourists say they feel a spooky, "haunted" atmosphere. While not officially listed as a famous paranormal spot, recent travelers have reported the same experiences. A ghostly bare-chested teenager is seen walking around the resort spa, and he is seen sometimes walking into a wall. Strange whispering is sometimes heard. Local Hoesni Pardede claims he encountered a male ghost that was missing his eyes. The male ghost was reaching out from him. Hoesni backed up immediately and tripped and fell. When Hoesni stood up, the entity was gone. Hoesni says it was the most frightening thing he ever experienced. Another local they call "Little Ricky" also claims he say the spirit of "No Eyes" and it was a very scary moment for him.

Tanah Merah Art Resort (Ubud):
Guests have reported encounters with a "woman in white" that is seen in various rooms. Some guests say she has a strange smile on her face. The most haunted section is Rumah 5. Many tourists experienced unsettling moments in Rumah 5. Doran Lycroft from Ohio says that he saw strange black goo running down the wall. Then he heard disembodied laughter and when he looked back at the wall, the goo was gone. Another guest wrote a specific review mentioning escaping from "Rumah 5" due to an unsettling experience. The person writing the review did not explain what the unsettling experience was. This resort is sometimes confused with the abandoned "Ghost Palace" (PI Bedugul).

Idham Hutabarat and his girlfriend are at the abandoned Taman Festival Amusement Park, when they see a HUGE cryptid called the Ahool fly by and head to the jungle.

Abandoned Sites:
Several abandoned spots, often called "ghost palaces," are nearby, including the Bedugul Taman Rekreasi Hotel and Taman Festival amusement park, which are rumored to be filled with spirits. Small items are sometimes picked up and thrown by an unseen force. In Balinese culture, the belief in spirits is part of daily life. Locals and visitors often report a "heavy" or spiritual presence in older buildings, specifically in Ubud. Ubud is a deeply spiritual place where locals believe in a constant presence of spirits, both good and bad. Several specific locations in and around Ubud are famous for reported paranormal activity or an "eerie" atmosphere. A local named Idham Hutabarat claims that he was walking around the Taman Festival amusement park with his girlfriend and he heard a strange flapping sound. His girlfriend looked up and saw the cryptid known as the Ahool. Idham says the creature was huge! Idham and his girlfriend watched as the creature flew off into the horizon.

The "Ghost Palace" Hotel (P_I_ Bedugul Taman Rekreasi Hotel & Resort):
Located about an hour north of Ubud in Bedugul, this massive-abandoned resort is Bali's most famous haunted site. It is rumored to be haunted by the ghosts of workers who died during its construction. The sound of construction is heard late at night and there is no one around. There is sometimes the sound of pounding and visitors believe the pounding sounds originate with "Tommy Knockers".

Villa Awang Awang:
Some visitors have reported "cheeky spirits" and unexplained flickering lights, though management often attributes these to local wiring issues. In Balinese Hinduism, the world is seen as a balance between the divine and the demonic. You will often see Daily Offerings (Canang Sari): These are placed at temple entrances and on the ground to appease spirits and maintain harmony. High Compound Walls may be for privacy, but some believe these walls help protect homes from wandering spirits. Because Ubud is the "cultural heart" of Bali, the dense jungles and ancient temples—like those in the Sacred Monkey Forest Sanctuary—can feel intensely atmospheric or "heavy" to those sensitive to spiritual energy.

Yusuf Siregar encounters the elusive Orang Pendek.

Cryptids in Indonesia

Indonesia is home to several famous cryptids, particularly within the dense rainforests of Sumatra and Java. I will only name a few, but let me tell you, they have many. Here are the ones I selected. The most well-known is the Orang Pendek ("short person"), a bipedal, ape-like creature documented by locals and researchers. Other notable Indonesian cryptids include the winged Ahool, the giant ape Orang Gadang, and the horned cat. A local named Yusuf Siregar claims he saw an Orang Pendek. This cryptid is 1-meter tall, herbivorous, bipedal primate covered in short fur, often reported in Sumatra. Some locals have seen the Ahool. Ahool is a giant bat-like creature with a 10-foot wingspan, large dark eyes, and a loud shrieking cry, said to live in Java. A terrifying cryptid is the Orang Gadang. Locals describe the Orang Gadang as a "Sumatran Bigfoot," this creature is said to be between 7.5 and 12 feet tall and covered with dark hair. Horned Cat is reported on the Sunda Islands, this feline is said to be the size of a domestic cat but with small horns above its eyes. When in the jungles, watch out for the Cigua. The Cigua is a thick-set, mane-covered creature resembling a heavily built Sumatran tiger. These cryptids inhabit remote, unexplored jungles, and some sightings had multiple witnesses, which makes a multiple witness sighting credible.

UFOs/UAPs in Indonesia

There have been numerous UFO sightings in Indonesia, with reports dating back to 1942. A dedicated group, Beta-UFO, maintains a list of hundreds of sightings, spanning from 1883 to the present day. Key reports include occurrences in Sumatra (1942), Surabaya (1964), Bali (1973), and more recent sightings in Bandung and Pekanbaru, often described as strange aerial phenomena. Major documented sightings include Medan (1953, 1955), Alor and Pantar Islands (1959), and various locations in East Java. Many Indonesians often lean toward spiritual or supernatural explanations (ghosts/demons) for unexplained aerial events, says psychologist Agustinus.

Winged Entities in Indonesia

Winged entities in Indonesia range from mythical creatures and folklore spirits to unique wildlife, including the bat-like Ahool, the vampiric detached head Kuyang, and the divine, eagle-like Garuda. Other sightings include Balinese winged lions (Singa Bersayap), flying deities, and the small, gliding Draco Volans lizard. Ahool is a massive, bat-like creature with a reported 28-foot wingspan, often sighted in the jungles of Java. Kuyang (Borneo) is a dark magic user whose head detaches from its body, flying with entrails hanging below to drink blood. Garuda is powerful, divine avian creature and the national symbol, often depicted with human-like features and vast wings.

IS YUANYANG COUNTY – CHINA HAUNTED?

Based on available travel information and local folklore, Yuanyang County in Yunnan, China, is not generally considered "haunted" in the sense of having famous ghost stories or haunted buildings. Instead, the region is renowned for its breathtaking, thousand-year-old rice terraces cultivated by the Hani people, which are a UNESCO World Heritage site.

However, there are nuances in how the area is perceived:

- Cultural Beliefs in Spirits: The Hani people who live in Yuanyang have a rich culture that includes
- animistic beliefs. They believe in spirits of nature, such as the "God of Mountain" or "God of Zhai," and
- they worship "Dragon Trees" as protectors against evil spirits. These rituals are about protection and
- respect, not because the area is considered "haunted" by Western definitions.
- "Ghost Valley" Confusion: There is a "Ghost Valley" (Lizi Gouge) in Luliang County, Yunnan, which is
- known for strange noises and reputed hauntings. This is a different location than Yuanyang County,
- though both are in Yunnan province.
- Atmospheric "Ghost Towns": Some tourists have described certain Hani villages or the Hani
- Nationality Folk Village as looking deserted or having a "ghostly" feel, especially when covered in
- the thick, daily fog that characterizes the area. This is a reflection of the, at times, quiet and
- traditional, rustic atmosphere rather than supernatural activity.

SPECIAL NOTE: The client who has provided this story does not want to disclose her name, her address, city or state where she lives in. It could place her family in danger. The name "Moonshadow" is a fictional name. I will call the client "Dora".

Date: 3/20/2026. Time: 1500 hours. I received a call from my new client that we will call Dora. Dora says that she moved into a neighborhood that was quiet, peaceful and all of the neighbors got along with each other. Then one day a woman moved in, right next door to Dora. We will call this new neighbor Stacey. Stacey was an extrovert, very loud, very vocal. Stacey was known to yell at her husband constantly. It was rumored that Stacey's husband was having an affair with another woman and that is why he purchased a single man's sports car, to attract the ladies. Stacey's husband would leave at all hours of the day or night. When he got home, Stacey would be waiting and the fight begins. Sometimes Stacey and her husband would yell at each other in the middle of the street at 3 am. Stacey turned to the religion of Santeria. At times neighbors would find burned candles, dried-up flower pedals and rotten food on Stacey's driveway. Dora said neighbors theorized that she was performing rituals on her driveway. Some neighbors believe that she was trying to place a curse on her husband and his side girlfriend.

Things started to settle down, when Stacey campaigned to become the Captain of the Neighborhood Watch. Stacey was so demanding with her neighbors, she was voted in easily as the new Captain. For a few months, things were normal. Neighborhood Watch would have their meetings, Stacey seemed happy and cheerful. Then things started turning dark. If you missed a meeting, Stacey would talk bad about you. If you didn't mow your lawn, Stacey would talk about you. In fact, Stacey would walk to your home and talk with one of the neighbors on how your lawn looked disgusting and was an eye-sore, because you didn't mow your lawn. If you got into a heated conversation with Stacey, she would call the police on you and accuse you of using drugs. The police did anything that Stacey wanted, because she was friends with higher-ups. Stacey discovered that one of the neighbors was on the DOJ (Department of Justice) watch list for having dated a 17-year-old minor. Stacey would talk about this offender at every meeting and would practically stalk his house, looking at his house from the street, parking her car in front of his house, looking through his windows and talking to neighbors on the street on how this neighbor is an offender. It got so bad for the offender, that he had to move out of the neighborhood. Stacey's harassment of this neighbor was relentless. Dora says that Stacey even berated her for not attending any meetings. Dora told Stacey that there was no reason to attend the meetings, when all she does is bad mouth people. Stacey then told the neighbors in the meeting that Dora steps out into her backyard naked and that she could see Dora from her 2nd story balcony. Dora claims this is not true and it never happened. Finally, things got worse for Stacey, her husband left her for another woman and Stacey decided to move away. The neighbors cheered when the Captain of the Neighborhood Watch moved into a new city.

After Stacey moved, it was 7 months later that everyone learned that Stacey had a massive heart attack and died. Dora said probably due to stress. After Stacey died, 3 months later the neighborhood became haunted. Unusual paranormal activity started taking place. At the home of the offender, a headless chicken was found on the front lawn. Strange drumming would be heard in the neighborhood. Dora says when Stacey's house was vacant, she heard footsteps in the backyard and saw a human eye peeking through the hole in the wooden fence. Dora said that there was no one at Stacey's vacant house and couldn't understand why she was seeing a human eye looking through the peep hole. Some neighbors made claim that at night-time, they would sometimes see 2 red eyes looking back at them. Some neighbor's claimed to have been touched, pinched and even scratched. One neighbor said they saw the partial apparition of Stacey wandering down the street. Some neighbors even claimed that they would hear Stacey's wicked voice. The neighbors felt that Stacey, the Witch of Moonshadow Way was back and they wanted her gone! The final straw was when one of the neighbor's beloved cat named Stookie, was hit by a car. This neighbor believes it was the handiwork of the Witch of Moonshadow Way.

THE HELP THAT THEY WILL RECEIVE:

I contacted a ghost hunting group in their city. This group has a member that is a shaman. They will contact Dora and proceed with a neighborhood investigation/inspection. They will also have their shaman conduct a neighborhood cleansing. I also explained to Dora how to conduct a Roman Catholic house blessing. Dora will immediately proceed with this. Dora is Catholic and some of her neighbors are Catholic. I explained to Dora to go ahead and get some angel figurines and dip those angel figurines into holy water and say a prayer to each blessed angel. Place those angels around doorways and windows and conduct another prayer, calling upon angels to banish any negativity in the house. The blessed angels will bring in a positive atmosphere into the home. I will stay in touch with Dora, to make sure that the cleansings worked. Dora and 2 of her neighbors are also going to get a full submersion baptism, just in case the negative energy is attached to them. CASE PENDING.

Why We Need to Believe in the Afterlife in the 21st Century

Sat Jan 26, 2008 3:07 pm

BELOW IS A "BLAST FROM THE PAST"

It seems like now more than ever, people are drawn into ghost hunting groups. I have always had an interest in the paranormal and before I knew it, I was a full-fledged member of H.P.I. (Haunted and Paranormal Investigations) of Northern California. I joined this group, to record their investigations through my writings and to seek out the truth in regard to the afterlife. Is there really an afterlife? The belief in the afterlife has been around since the dawn of man. According to Tibetan Buddhism, the spirit of the departed goes through a process lasting forty-nine days, that is divided up into three stages called 'bardos'. When the bardo transition is completed, the person either enters nirvana or returns to earth for rebirth or reincarnation. All throughout the world and in all religions, there is some kind of belief in the afterlife. Cultures and people continents away believe in the afterlife? Why is this so? Why must we believe in the afterlife? With the Tibetan Buddhism religion, it is imperative that the dying person remain conscience as long as possible, because the thoughts one has while passing over into death, heavily influence the nature of the after-death experience and if they do not achieve nirvana, it will influence their next incarnation.

Let's hop a half a world away to the American Indian. The realm of the dead for the American Indian can be anything similar to their present day world. Many traditional Plains Indian societies imagine the afterlife as a rolling prairie, successfully hunting bison, living in tipis, feasting and dancing. Other Native American Indian societies sort of see the afterlife as a pale, gloomy realm. The Eskimos on the other hand have the primary concept that reincarnation occurs right after death. The aboriginal peoples of America are influenced with shamanism who have a great influence on their beliefs in life-after-death. These shamans at times guide souls of the dead to their home in the afterlife. At times the Shaman is the mediator between the living and the dead. Shamans believe in various type of spirits from animal spirits to forces of nature to spirits of the their own kind.

Now let's hop on down to Mexico. The Day of the Dead. What's the big fuss about? The original celebration can be traced to many Mesoamerican native traditions, such as the festivities held during the Aztec month of Miccailhuitontli, ritually presided by the "Lady of the Dead" (Mictecacihuatl) and dedicated to children and the dead. In the Aztec calendar, this ritual fell roughly at the end of the Gregorian month of July and the beginning of August, but in the postconquest era it was moved by Spanish priests so that it coincided with the Christian holiday of All Hallows Eve (in Spanish: "Día de Todos Santos.") This was a vain effort to transform the observance from something profane to a Christian celebration. The result is that Mexicans now celebrate the day of the dead during the first two days of November, rather than at the beginning of summer. Day of the Dead is characterized by the traditional Mexican blend of ancient aboriginal and introduced Christian features.

The holiday's activities consist of families welcoming their dead back into their homes and visiting the graves of their close kin.

There...I gave you three examples of people and cultures that believe in the afterlife and I am not going to delve into other cultures or this article will turn into a book. But, I will point out three other cultures who had a deep rooted belief in the afterlife. The Chinese, who believed that humans possessed two souls the Po and the Hun. Then there is the Japanese worship of Kami, which is the worshipping of gods, nature spirits and spiritual presences. Of course, how can I forget the Egyptians who believed that eternal life can be obtained through mummification.

Now I must ponder, how can all of these people and all of these cultures believe so strongly about the afterlife? Because we have a sense to preserve. If nothing is preserved, our history becomes obsolete, then what is the purpose of waking up in the morning and going to work? Why should we accomplish anything, because all will be forgotten and disappear into the abyss of nothingness.

We must feel like we have a purpose, we must have a sense of accomplishment and we must feel like we will be remembered for all time, for all infinity. We seek immortality. That immortality is through our spiritual essence. We know that energy cannot be destroyed, only altered. If the aura, the energy that surrounds our living bodies continues to exist, it will preserve what we are, who we are.

As I joined this ghost hunting group to seek out answers to the afterlife, you may ask...do I believe? My answer is that I am almost there, but I still want to see more proof. The proof that I have seen, some can be explained away. For example, the digital photographs of orbs. This can easily be explained as dust orbs. But, once in a West Sacramento residential haunting investigation, these dust orbs seemed to have intelligence. I asked the entity to have an orb move across my chest twice for a yes and once for a no. Looking at the TV monitor, I would ask a question and actually see an orb move across my chest either 2 times or once as if answering me.

Another investigation that took place in a Folsom cemetery, I asked through the audio digital recorder if there was anyone in my car and the answer, when played back was a distinct male voice that said "yes". Of course, I have heard other EVPs and I simply can't explain where these voices are coming from. At the same Folsom cemetery I asked the entity to touch me and in 5 seconds, I was bleeding from my knee and then a bruise appeared in the form of a thumb. I can explain this away as a spider bite, but how coincidental that a spider would bite me within 5 seconds after I asked to be touched.

I will continue to hunt ghosts, but I hope one day, I will see something with my naked eyes. There has got to be some truth to the afterlife. Why would so many people throughout the world believe in the afterlife? What brought these people from all walks of life to believe that we will materialize in a spiritual form after death? Why does our own bible tell us that we will live again after death, that we will be resurrected.

What we don't know is considered paranormal, what we know is considered science. The afterlife is something we don't understand, we have a hard time comprehending and therefore, it's simply pseudoscience or we can call it the paranormal. Perhaps while we are living, it's not meant for us to know, maybe we can only find the answers after we die.

Mankind has reached the 21st Century and we are more paranoid than ever. After 9/11 we were in tears, we were fearful of terrorist attacks, we were afraid of our own mortality. We turn on CNN News and hear about gang violence, young soldiers losing their lives in Iraq, tsunamis taking lives, hurricanes wracking devastation, SARS, AIDS, Bird flu, global warming. We are more scared than ever before. We think of the apocalypse. Some people think of the Mayan prediction of 2012. We think of our families, the preservation of life, the preservation of our history, our culture. We are so paranoid about the survival of mankind, that we embrace the thought of afterlife. More and more people are curious about our survival after death, because it seems that every day we face death. We hear it on the news, we drive down the freeway and see a horrendous car accident. Death is all around us. While death embraces mankind we seek out the light, we seek out immortality. It's a simple answer...."we want to live!" So, perhaps that is why there are so many ghost hunting groups cropping up all over the world. There are people from all walks of life, seeking the answer in regard to our immortal soul. Will we be remembered or will we be forgotten? I do believe we will be remembered, energy is a powerful force in the universe and the whole universe is 'energized'. Of course, that is my own opinion.

At times I almost feel like John Cusack in the movie 1408. He is a disbeliever of the afterlife and gravitates towards a very haunted hotel room, Room 1408 and at some point of time, Samuel L. Jackson says to him..."I told you not to go into Room 1408". Now, if I can find my own Room 1408....maybe someday that day will come.

Daisetsuzan National Park in Hokkaido is known for eerie, unexplained mysteries. The most famous is the 1989 "SOS incident" on Mount Asahidake, where rescuers found a large SOS sign made of trees, leading to the discovery of unidentified skeletal remains.

Key "Eerie" Aspects of Daisetsuzan:

- The SOS Incident (1989): A helicopter looking for lost hikers found a 5-meter-long SOS sign made from birch
- trees. The lost hikers were found elsewhere, but the sign had been there for years. Police found remains of two
- different people nearby, and the case remains a chilling unsolved mystery.
- The "Ghost Bridge" (Taushubetsu River Bridge): Located in Lake Nukabira, this abandoned railway bridge is
- submerged, but appears like a ghost when water levels drop from January to September.
- Ainu Legends: The mountains are known as Kamui Mintara ("Playground of the Gods") by the indigenous
- Ainu, a place with deep spiritual significance and many natural wonders.

While the park is primarily a popular spot for hiking and nature, the unsolved mysteries, especially the SOS incident, have given parts of it a reputation for being eerie or hauntingly mysterious.
